Chapter 252: Creation of the Dark Heavenly Soldiers

Sung Jin-Woo, the Shadow Sovereign, once again displayed his unmatched ingenuity and mastery over creation by birthing a new legion of warriors—the Dark Heavenly Soldiers. These beings, born from the fruits of trees sprouted from the seeds of the Second World Tree, were a testament to his divine prowess and far-reaching vision.

The Origin of the Dark Heavenly Soldiers

The Second World Tree, a monumental creation by Sung Jin-Woo, was planted to spread across the multiverse, seeding countless dimensions with its progeny. From its seeds, new trees sprouted in infinite worlds, each bearing the power to birth the Dark Heavenly Soldiers.

These trees, connected to Sung Jin-Woo’s will, grew in sacred sanctuaries and hidden realms. They were symbols of his dominion, spreading the power of shadows across the multiverse. From the fruits of these trees, the Dark Heavenly Soldiers emerged, fully formed and ready to serve.

The Dark Heavenly Soldiers' Characteristics

1. Physical Appearance:

Armor and Wings: The Dark Heavenly Soldiers were adorned in silver armor that gleamed even in the deepest shadows. Their golden helmets bore intricate designs, symbolizing their loyalty to the Shadow Sovereign.

Skin and Wings: Unlike the radiant white skin and white wings of the original Heavenly Soldiers, the Dark Heavenly Soldiers had obsidian-black skin and black wings, exuding an aura of power and mystery.

Black Heart: Each Dark Heavenly Soldier was born with a black heart, serving as both their mana core and the source of their shadow abilities.

2. Abilities:

Invisibility: A unique skill allowing them to vanish from sight, making them unparalleled spies and assassins.

Shadow World: The ability to traverse the Shadow World, enabling them to move unseen across dimensions and ambush enemies.

Shadow Soldiers: Each Dark Heavenly Soldier could summon shadow soldiers of their own, granting them armies within armies.

Telekinesis: A skill allowing them to manipulate objects and opponents with their will alone, further enhancing their combat capabilities.

3. Gender and Fertility:
Unlike most divine creations, the Dark Heavenly Soldiers were fertile beings with distinct genders, ranging from male to female. They formed families, married one another, and gave birth to new generations, ensuring the perpetuity of their kind.

The Role of the Dark Heavenly Soldiers

1. Guardians of the Second World Tree:
The primary duty of the Dark Heavenly Soldiers was to guard all the trees sprouted from the seeds of the Second World Tree across the multiverse. These trees, vital to Sung Jin-Woo’s plan, were protected with unwavering vigilance.

2. Planters of the Shadow Grove:
Beyond guarding the existing trees, the Dark Heavenly Soldiers were tasked with planting more seeds, ensuring the proliferation of the Second World Tree’s legacy. They carried these seeds to unexplored dimensions, expanding the reach of the Shadow Sovereign’s influence.

3. Army of the Shadow Sovereign:
Created in centillions, a number beyond comprehension, the Dark Heavenly Soldiers became one of the most powerful forces under Sung Jin-Woo's command. Their numbers and abilities ensured that no rebellion, invasion, or calamity could threaten the Shadow Sovereign’s dominion.

The Dark Heavenly Soldiers' Legacy

The creation of the Dark Heavenly Soldiers marked the beginning of a new era in the multiverse. As they spread across countless dimensions, planting and nurturing the Second World Tree's progeny, they wove Sung Jin-Woo’s shadow into the very fabric of reality.

The harmonious balance of their existence, with families and offspring, reflected Sung Jin-Woo’s evolving vision—not just of dominance, but of an eternal, self-sustaining legacy. The Dark Heavenly Soldiers weren’t mere tools of war; they were living, breathing symbols of the Shadow Sovereign’s enduring reign.

Wherever the trees of the Second World Tree grew, so did the influence of the Shadow Sovereign. The multiverse became a tapestry of shadow and light, eternally marked by the birth of the Dark Heavenly Soldiers.
